TRUE BILLS VOTED IN CATTLE CASE

Defendants Named In Homewood
Must Now Appear In Criminal
Court In Chicago In Near Future

Toil worn farmers, demanding that justice be done, jammed the courtroom in the county highway police station in Homewood Wednesday. They were there for the trial of thirteen men, accused as members of a cattle rustling ring responsible for the theft of $50,000 in live stock in Cook and Will counties and in northern Indiana.

Defense attorneys demanded a bill of particulars and copies of the warrants served on their clients. Justice of the Peace Arthur Dillner continued the hearing until April 26.

Three of the defendants are cattle dealers, charged with failure to keep proper records of their sales. They are: Peopel Jungiwick, 151st street and Kedzie avenue, Harvey; Nathan Fischer 147th street near Ridgeland avenue, Tinley Park, and Henry Yunker, 143rd street and Keane avenue, Orland township.

The ten others charged either with larceny, or with being an accessory to larceny, or both, are: Robert Line, 139th street and Keane avenue, Crestwood; his brother, Leland, 720 West 120th street; Earl Anderson, Oak Forest; Frank Benca, 82d avenue and 164th street, Orland Park; Edward Kooyenga and his brother, Drew, both of 115th street and Cicero avenue, Worth township; James Baker, 137th street and 44th avenue, Crestwood; Edward Mosel, 145th St. and Albany avenue, Posen; Patrick Lydon, 14846 Kenton avenue, Blue Island; and Rolland Lyons, Vermont and Ashland avenues, Blue Island.

Due to the fact that the trial was continued so many times at Homewood, the plaintiffs decided after the last continuance to take this case to the Criminal Court in Chicago and did so Thursday morning. They managed to get true bills against practically all of these men.

To Be Well Dressed

To be well dressed is an asset. Nash tailored clothes insure that you are well dressed. They wear longer, look well longer. That is why so many Nash customers continue buying year after year. Investigate Nash before you invest again in a new suit or top coat. See Nash ad on the back page of this paper.

Many Nash customers find they are well dressed at less cost than before they tried the Nash way. Why not enjoy this economical way, too? It costs nothing to find out. See the Nash advertisement on back page.

An Open Letter

New Lenox, Ill.,

April 10, 1939.

Editor, Mokena News Bulletin,

Mokena, Ill.

My dear Mr. Semmler:

An effort is apparently being made in New Lenox to make it appear that the Worker's Alliance sponsored or at least had something to do with the resolution and appropriation of $800, for an audit by certified public accountants of the town books for the past fourteen years. This gossip or allegation is absolutely untrue and unfounded and is easily disproved by the following facts.

The Workers' Alliance is an organization of WPA workers and relief clients and neither Mr. Johnson who moved the adoption of the resolution nor Mr. Oram, who seconded the motion are on WPA or relief. Mr. Butzen who seconded the motion for the appropriation is a member of the Workers' Alliance and there were a few others of our members in the hall, several of whom were opposed to both the resolution and the appropriation and voted against their adoption.

The Workers' Alliance is composed of folks of all races, political parties and all religious beliefs. There is nothing in its practices, beliefs, by-laws or constitution which is not compatible with good Americanism. It is not a "Red" or Communist organization and it is allowed by Federal, State and local WPA authorities to post notices of its meetings on Project bulletin boards, have job stewards on every gang and grievance committees whose representatives may appear before local, county, State and National administrators, and it publishes a bi-weekly paper entitled "Work," The Workers' Alliance of America, which is our national organization, has a membership of 800,000 throughout the entire forty-eight states, maintains a Vocational office at 930 M Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., and has representative to present our views to the United States Senate and House of Representatives, and they are received by all Congressional Committees and sub-committees and given courteous treatment and consideration by those bodies as a matter of course. In view of these facts the efforts to destroy our New Lenox local by attempts to stir up strife and dissension among our members only cause me to smile at the pettiness and narrow-minded vision of some peanut politician peddlers of gossip who are like a simple minded fellow at Kankakee who is trying to cut down a sturdy old oak with a dull and broken-bladed pocket knife.

No, Mr. Editor, our members who attended the New Lenox Town meeting were only exercising their constitutional rights as citizens. They were not instructed in this matter at any meeting of the Workers' Alliance and the matter was never discussed at any such meeting. As before mentioned our members, as citizens, are within their rights in agreeing or disagreeing with the proponents of the resolutions and appropriation in question. Personally, I favor them because I have heard aspersions cast on the township administration all during the ten years I have lived in New Lenox and I feel that this audit will be a feather in the cap of honest officials and end for all time the talk about their alleged short-comings. If however, the books show wrong-doing the people should know it. I can see no valid reason why any honest town official should feel called on to oppose such an audit. I can distinctly see, however, why one who wasn't sure what the result of such an examination of his records might reveal, would oppose it to the bitter end.

I trust this letter will serve to enlighten those of the townspeople who have the ability to read and the intelligence to take the News-Bulletin for information on local affairs, as to the guiltlessness of the Workers' Alliance in, as a body, participating in any proceedings in the town meeting referred to.

Thanking you for the space this will occupy and for past favors, and with best personal regards, I am,

Yours truly,

Henry T. Skinner, chrmn.

Distinctive Initials
In Easy Stitchery

Being personal is the distinctive thing with linens and personal accessories today. These alphabets, mainly in lazy-daisy stitch, are most effective in black or green and a color or in two shades of a color. You'll want to put them on everything! They're so quickly embroidered even that youngster of twelve would enjoy doing them. Pattern 1947 contains a transfer pattern of two 2¼-inch and two 1½-inch alphabets; directions for placing initials; illustrations of stitches.

Send 15 cents in coins for this pattern to The Sewing Circle, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

Please write your name, address and pattern number plainly.

PREPONDERANT SENTIMENT

"AFTER one hundred and fifty years, notwithstanding expansion of territory, enormous increase in population and profound economic changes; despite direct attack and subversive influences; there is every indication that the vastly preponderant sentiment of the American people is that our form of government shall be preserved." — Charles Evans Hughes, Chief Justice of the United States.

Lacking in Action

What then does it signify that you are generous in talk, if, when it comes to the point, your help has died out?—Plautus.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to the voters of School District No. 146 for their loyal support and the overwhelming vote given us in the school election Saturday, April 8th. We promise to continue to do our utmost in bettering conditions of the school that may arise due to the lack of funds.

It is reported that a number of boys from 15 to 18 years have been applying for drivers licenses before notaries without showing written consent from their parents. The notaries have been advised to be careful not to issue such licenses to boys under age unless their parents accompany them and give their consent to the issuing of such licenses or give their consent by writing. It has been pointed out that if notaries execute applications for such licenses without the consent of parents or guardians, they can be made defendants in damage suits in case of accidents to which boys obtaining applications without the parents consent, may be involved. In case of injury or death resulting from such accidents the notaries who are not protected by parents consent may be sued for damages and also their sureties.

Maybe you would like to see what the latest styles are in men's and ladies suits and coats are. They are all correctly and ably shown in the Nash Style book. Just call the Nash man if you do. See their ad on back page.

Don't forget to come to the Tinley Park Gym April 18, 8:15 p. m., to see "Simple Simon Simple", a domestic comedy, given by St. John's Walter League of Cooper's Grove.

The play is chuckle of comedy with unexpected twists and surprises with a touch of romance. See if Simon's invention really turn out to be peaches and cream. You'll just love everything about "Simple Simon Simple".

The characters are: Simon Simple an inventor, William Stelter; Sophie Simple, his wife, Pearl Wille; Stella Simple, their daughter, Wilma Meyer; Sammy Simple, their son, Marvin Meyer; Sally Ann, maid at the Simples, Dorothy Wille; Minerva Webb, a boarder, Helen Stelter; Hazel Hawkins, Sammy's fiancée, Lois Cohrs; Thankful Barlow who runs the hotel Elite, Edwin Cohrs; Elwood Elkins, just from the city, Oscar Niefeldt; Dorothea Duckworth, from the city, Marie Stelter. Mrs. H. F. Meyer is directing the play.

Entertainment will be furnished between acts featuring the cavaliers.

It is our hope that every Sunday will be as well used, by way of the Church attendance as was Easter. It is a matter you are personally responsible for. Attend church somewhere. But, attend church. A swimming pool is better to swim in, than a bath tub, even though you have the tub in your home and can get wet in it. God can be best worshipped in a corporate worship in a place dedicated to such a service.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 9.
The Golden Text was, "I am the Lord that healeth thee" (Exodus 15:26).
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord and whose hope the Lord is. Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise" (Jeremiah 17:7, 14).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "All reality is in God and His creation, harmonious and eternal. That which He creates is good, and He makes all that is made. Therefore the only reality of sin, sickness, or death is the awful fact that unrealities seem real to human, erring belief, until God strips off their disguise. They are not true, because they are not of God" (p. 472).

LET'S GO WEST

By Col. Don C. Hall

This will be my last article on Travel To The West and my final comment until we report from New York or after our return from the opening at the New York Fair which promises to be a "Whalen" big show, if you get my meaning.

I have said all I could publically and privately, and in my writings, with regard to the excellence of the California Exposition, without recourse to the fund of adjectives I might command, and so I leave the visitors to the Fair to find if he can, an adequate vocabulary for the expression of his awe and admiration as he beholds its beauty and worthwhileness.

Between here and there, are enough wonders to arouse your mind energies and with Treasure Island as a climax, in the unfolding transformation scene as you push back the horizon to the West, you will have acquired a pleasing mental picture, never to be forgotten.

I have been questioned personally and by letter, as to the best, safest and cheapest modes of travel, and in fact it has been my thought to bring out as clearly as possible, an expression which would not be considered biased or prejudiced, regarding those subjects.

As to cost: if you are a capable "budget balancer", and you should be, your "ability to pay" can take care of the expense. The factors to be taken into consideration are: first of all, safety, having regarded my admonition to TAKE TIME, NOT TO HURRY OR BE HASTY, and above all to forget speed.

I say without hesitation, that the safest and sanest way to travel is the Public Highway. Even though you disregard every rule of reason or common sense judgment, plunging ahead with drowsy "relay" drivers night and day it is still the safest. Fool drivers are so few that you can usually dodge them.

Possibly a SLOW railway passenger train, running on a daylight schedule with "lay overs", at night, might be the very best for comfort and convenience of the would be, sight-seer and visitor to the Fair. So far I have yet to find a tour of that kind suggested or advertised. I have before me an alluring piece of illustrated advertising; let me quote from it: "So for example on... the shortest, fastest route to San Francisco" and "Fast extra fare, stream-liner" to the coast, the very factors emphasized that you don't want.

I would say: if you must go by train: get a railroad schedule, check out a light run, take a day coach, stop at the end of the day, find a good place to eat and rest, then take the train for the next daylight run, and continue until you have "gone over the top."

If you want to go out there, it makes little difference what you take airplane, railway train or bus, but if you want to "take your time" go sage and see it all. Get a reasonably good auto with good rubber and properly serviced. Learn a few facts about oil and gas suitable for the car you drive, read and observe the signs along the routes. Doing this and carrying all necessary identification papers for yourself and car, you need have no fear of any constituted authority along the route.

Possibly there never will be a really 'common sense' highway. If there ever is a thoroughly established improvement over the 'two lane' properly marked highway, it will be found in a four lane divided highway and never in a three or four lane wide highway.

On the four lane divided highway will be found the nearest approach to absolute safety in automobile travel.

Pull out about 7:30 or 8:00 a. m., thoroughly awaken, drive until 4 or 5 p. m., then stop at the first town or cabin camp. Don't drive on to a possible next. Stop at the FIRST. If you are as genial as you expect the camp or hotel management to be, you will be surprised at what they will do for you. Ask for a skillet and a percolator, fry up a rasher of bacon and a few eggs, and with a cup of 'southern drips, you are then ready for a comfortable bed, a dreamless sleep and the 'trail' again in the morning.

Your car, carefully driven in the daylight while you are wide awake; the best, the most convenient and the safest mode of travel and the 'see it all' route for the 'once in a life-time' tourist.

In closing, there isn't any such thing as 'luck', 'good or bad', things don't 'just happen.' Everybody is 'Providential' and finally, there is no substitute for personal experience.

Until April 30 in New York,

Fraternally,
COL. DON C. HALL.

I'LL TUNE OUT THE ALKA-SELTZER ANNOUNCEMENT

Don't—THAT'S THE MOST IMPORTANT THING YOU'LL HEAR TONIGHT

When statements about Alka-Seltzer are made over the air, please, please believe them.

Mrs. Oma Catherine Jones

MILLIONS enjoy greater freedom from everyday aches and pains because they have heard—and believed—Alka-Seltzer announcements over the air or have read—and believed—printed statements about Alka-Seltzer.

To these millions the relief obtained from the use of Alka-Seltzer is worth much more than the genuine enjoyment they get from Alka-Seltzer broadcasts.

Why don't you try the Alka-Seltzer way to relief from Gas on Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Acid Indigestion and Distress of Colds, "Morning After" and Muscular Aches and Pains?

YOU GET TWO FOLD RELIEF

First—relief from pain, because Alka-Seltzer contains an analgesic (sodium salt of aspirin).

Second—relief from the over-acid condition that is often associated with these everyday ailments, because Alka-Seltzer contains alkalinizing agents.

Get Alka-Seltzer the next time you pass a drug store

JOHN AND SALLY

by Paul Groskopf

John was looking forward to this ride in the woods for a whole week; at last the day had come.

As they were going along John began to talk to Sally. Sally could not talk English, but she could understand some English. Sally's eyes were dark blue; her hair sparkled in the sunlight; she was admired by both men and women. John pointed out to her the places of interest, and then he would explain why they were notable. Sometimes Sally would nod her head, as she understood what he was talking about.

At last they were both getting tired so they turned around and headed for home.

When they got there, John put Sally in the stable, took the saddle and bridle off, fed her, put her blank on, and then he went in the house for supper.

WHAT WE DO IN RECREATION

by Hilda Zerbis

We do many things during our recreation period. Sometimes, when it is not fair weather out of doors, we spend our recreation time in the auditorium. When in the auditorium we play games as throwing bean bags through holes in a board, or at least trying to, throwing darts at a board, trying to get the highest score, and various games in which we pass a bean bag along the team as quickly as possible trying to beat the other set of girls. We have also played "teacher" with a bean bag for a ball.

When the weather is nice we have recreation outside. Then we play baseball and volleyball. Occasionally we have a game of jump-rope. We are going to have an athletic club and go in for track work, jumping, and all that goes with it.

Ross Klingler Assistant Editor

Outdoor Note: Ants, we read, can lift weights which are tremendous as compared with their own. Wasps and bees also can raise quite good-sized lumps.

"Once I saved a man's life but I never got a medal for it".

"How so?"
"A gentleman considerably intoxicated came home to his apartment and turned on only the hot water to take a bath in—and he would have been scalded to death, only I happened to be janitor of the building and there was no hot water."

Aviation Note: We will believe that aviation has really arrived when we see a two-passenger airplane go by with seven or eight high school students seated in it.

An old gentleman, browsing in a book store, "Last Days of Pompeii"—h'm! What did he die of?"

Clerk: "I'm not sure. Some sort of eruption, I believe."

Tall One: This grasshopper story comes from South Dakota. A farmer left his team in the field and went for a drink. When he returned, the grasshoppers had eaten the team and were pitching horseshoes to see who would get the neck-yoke and collar.

"Why did you break off your engagement?" asked Bill's inquisitive pal. "Well we were looking over our new house when my prospective mother-in-law said it would be rather small for three people; so I gracefully retired."

And then there was the widow who sued the editor of her local paper for saying in an obituary that her husband "had gone to a happier home."

As the train pulled into the depot, a traveling man stuck his head out of the window and calling to a boy standing near, said: "Here, sonny bring me a sandwich and here's another dime, get one for yourself."

Just as the train started to pull out, the boy returned, munching a sandwich, handed the man a dime and shouted: "Here's your dime, Mister, they only had one."

Visitor: "What's up? Had a bad day?"
Financier: "Yes. I've lost $5,000, and the worst of it is that $20 of it was my own money."

Our Bobby was in a store with his mother when he was given candy by one of the clerks. "What must you say, Bobbie?" "Charge it," he replied.

Jones: "Sorry, old man, my hen got loose and scratched up your garden."
Smith: "That's alright; my dog ate your hen." Jones: "Fine; I just ran over your dog and killed him."

Officer: (very angry): "Not a man in this division will be given liberty this afternoon." Voice: "Give me liberty or give me death." Officer: "Who said that?" Voice: "Patrick Henry."

Stout lady (at a street crossing): "Officer, could you see me across the street?" Officer (inclined to flattery): "Why, Ma'am, I could see you a mile off."

"These new fashions are absolutely freakish," said Mr. Jones. Every time I look at that new hat of yours, it makes me laugh."

"That's splendid dear," replied his wife. "I'll hang it up where you can see it when the bill arrives."

Pat: "Well Doctor, how is Lawyer Smith today?"
Doctor: "He's still lying at death's door." Pat: "Boy, that's grit for you. At death's door and still lying."

APRIL
By Margaret Creveling

April is the fourth month of our Julian Calendar and is usually a very pleasant and happy month, even the meaning of the month makes people think of the beautiful spring scenery for it means "it opens everything," and the first thoughts which come to our minds are the budding and blooming of trees and flowers.

A saying often heard about April is, "April showers bring May flowers." How true it is!

April received its name from Venus, the goddess of love, for she was sometimes called "Aphrodite," so by shortening this name we get the name for our month of April.

Each month has a jewel representing its name, and the jewel has a meaning for the month it represents. April has the diamond jewel with the meaning of "innocence." The flower for April is the daisy.

Many holidays are celebrated during the month of April; however, all these are not legal. Some of the main ones are: Washington Irving's Birthday, the third of April, Thomas Jefferson's, the thirteenth, Ulysses S. Grant's the 27th, and James Monroe's on the 28th. Easter usually comes in April. April first is All Fool's Day, the day people play tricks on one another.

The month of April brings fair weather and enjoyable outdoor sports so it is a popular month and its arrival is always pleasant.

Clouds of Unbelief Hang Over World

The darkness which enshrouded the earth while Christ hung on the cross is paralleled by the clouds of unbelief that hang low over our civilization. Dr. Walter A. Maier of Concordia Seminary asserted today in his nation wide Lutheran Hour broadcast.

Wherever men have rejected Christ and spurned his grace, the Lutheran theologian added, moral and spiritual darkness have beclouded their efforts. The blackest moments in history, according to Dr. Maier, have come in periods when Christ has been persecuted and his Word rejected.

Calling for an organized spiritual campaign of prayer, faith and Christian life, Dr. Maier said there would be no labor wars, domestic misery or international programs of violence if the Christian faith were universally accepted and its divine dynamics actually applied.

Dr. Maier placed part of the responsibility for the present era on anti-Biblical sentiment upon certain sectors of American religious and educational life which seek to becloud the plain statements of Christian "to veil the cross in darkness." faith contained in the Bible and Complete faith in the atonement of Christ was recommended by Dr. Maier as the "light by which men can live and die and find guidance for every darkened path."

An Interview with A Traveling Man

BY THE OFFICE BOY

Well, sir, I haven't been on a vacation for the last couple of weeks. Fact is I've been too busy sweeping up after the boss and Slug and the rest got through making a mess during the rush. Well, anyway, last night I had a little breathing spell, so I started out to see the sights of Mokena.

Well, I got down in front of the village hall and a fellow came walking out from the side of it, looking kind of downcast. So I asked him what was the matter? And he says "I just read that sign on the door!" Well, I stepped up and read it too, and it said Closed!

And the fellow said he guessed he'd never stop in Mokena again.

Well, that may be all right too. For he headed up the tracks and hopped a freight train for Chicago.

I wonder how many other villages have no use for a Jail? Mokena should be proud of that sign! At least I am!

Men's Fashion 'Authorities' Find Their Clients Stubborn; Colorful Clothes Still Taboo

Stylists Fight Century of 'Drabness' to Deck Mere Male in Modern Raiment This Spring; Mild Green Hues Win Favor

First off, there's nothing wrong with that blue serge Sunday-go-to-meetin' suit. But it's spring, and as usual the irrepressible men's fashion arbiters must have their say.

For 10 years this valiant crew has been trying to make the American male conscious of style and color, but the American male is stubborn. It's expensive enough, he says, to keep the wife fashionably dressed without being a clothes horse yourself. But in spite of himself the master of the home is becoming something of a peacock, blossoming out each spring with more colorful suits, shirts, ties and hats. Advance showings of clothing in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago, plainly show the trend.

George Bryan Brummell, better known as Beau, died in 1840. Since then the prevailing colors of men's clothes, as if in mourning, have been somber black, dark blue, dull gray and subdued browns. During Beau Brummell's lifetime and before, men's fashions in England, France and colonial America approached the apex of perfection, but as man became more interested in making a living he lost interest in his clothes. Now, say the fashion experts, we're emerging.

Still in Infancy.

This trend, however, is in the incubation stage. So timid is man in his dress life and the use of color that he limits his indulgence to brightly hued pajamas, a red bathing suit and an occasional green necktie. The designers of this year's spring and summer clothes had contemplated bright green to smash precedent but the men rebelled. The fashion experts then settled for off-shades like bluish green and greyish green, a few group stripes and heather stripes. Considering the handicap, it was a signal victory.

There's ample precedent for men's fashions, though let's hope the Twentieth century male doesn't become so vain as that of the Eighteenth century whose wardrobe is described by the historian, H. Dennis Bradley: "At least six coats of colored velvet and white satin, trimmed with gold and silver lace with perhaps one made in a plainer fashion for use on mournful occasions. With these he would have the choice of perhaps a dozen long waistcoats, made in blue satin, gold brocade, green silk, white satin, scarlet, black silk with fringes, all laced and embroidered in colored silks. His wardrobe also contained nine or ten pairs of breeches of velvet, satin and cloth; half a dozen three-cornered hats, silver laced, scalloped, laced with gold point d'Espagne, some with gold binding, and some bound plain; three dozen ruffled shirts and three dozen lace neck-cloths, and a like number of white silk, black silk, and fine cotton stockings; cambric and silk handkerchiefs galore; shoes adorned with buckles, set with diamonds; silver handled swords; silver mounted pistols and as varied a choice of jewelry as his means would allow."

Beau Brummell Brought Order.

Later in the century Beau Brummell introduced a semblance of taste to this profusion of color. Employing fewer hues and blending them expertly, he strove for quiet good taste and introduced what is considered today to be the essence of style—the ability to wear clothes with an unconscious flair.

American men's clothing hasn't always been dull. While the early Puritan fathers were straight-laced they were sufficiently style conscious to clothe themselves tastefully.

Beginning in the 1850s, and influenced by the industrial revolution in England and America, men's clothes—and women's too, of course—reflected the drabness of the times. Machinery tended to standardize all domains of life, not omitting fashion.

Now that Victorianism has passed, fashion experts think man will become "emancipated," as did women earlier in the century. Take it or leave it, here's a thumbnail sketch of modern men's fashions. Obviously they were not designed to replace the time-tested overall:

Mixed suits and trousers are fashionable, with liberal use of color such as dark green coat with willow green slacks. Right now big yarn tweed is the rage on the Pacific coast, which is becoming the creative center in both men's and women's sports wear. Slack suits may run the range of color and fabrics, with rayons, cottons, linen, hopsacking, twills and poplins holding the edge.

Coats Become Comfortable.

That the prim dressed-up look of 10 or 15 years ago is passing, can be seen in topcoats. They're comfortable, loose and casual, usually made of fleeces, shetland and chevrot. Popular off-shades, if the design is herringbone, plaid or small all-over effect, are between brown and black, black and white, gray and blue, or green and gray.

The newest in rainwear is the gabardine or poplin coat developed with the use of a new water repellent process which not only sheds rain but defies the laundryman or dry-cleaner.

Hats of Tyrolean shapes, with sharp curl brim and conical crown, bedecked with trimmings like pins, badger brushes, braided and corded bands, are increasingly popular. Straw hats next summer will be soft, imitating the felts. As for color, green is showing up prominently.

Shirts for spring and summer will have lighter grounds with simple stripes more widely spaced. Collar models are lower in front with a moderate spread to the points. Lighter fabrics are the rule and —A typical 1939 spring suit, well tailored and colorful, the type of apparel style authorities would like to popularize in their "emancipation" campaign

Summerlin, U. S. Protocol Chief, Prepares for Busiest Summer

This summer the White House sees the greatest invasion of foreign monarchs in American history. In April, May and June the representatives of five nations will descend on Washington and their reception is the personal problem of George Summerlin, chief of the state department's division of protocol.

The visitors:

King George and Queen Elizabeth of England, June 8 and 9, arriving on a cruiser with an entourage of 40 persons and about 200 trucks.

Eamon de Valera, New York - born prime minister of Eire, May 7. He will spend only one of his three nights in Washington at the White House.

Gen. Anastasio Somoza, president of Nicaragua, and Senora de Somoza, May 5.

Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway, to visit the Roosevelts at Hyde Park on April 27, also stopping at Washington.

Crown Prince Frederick and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark, who will visit at Hyde Park and later in Washington.

Representatives of Summerlin's department, or the chief officer himself, will escort each foreign dignitary's party from the time it enters the United States until it leaves. Already most details of the English "invasion" have been worked out, even to the time cameramen and newsreels are assigned for photographing the royal couple on its arrival at the Washington Union station. Two difficult problems are those of housing the English mon-arch's entourage, and arranging seats at the state dinner given in his honor. There will be no curtsying to the queen; the English royal couple has decreed that American customs shall prevail in such instances.

Such decisions are made after consultation between representatives of both nations concerned, in this case Summerlin and Alan Fredrick Lascelles, acting secretary to King George who visited the United States recently.

Summerlin's staff is small because seldom is the nation subjected to such a barrage of visitors. There are only 10 people in the division, five of them clerks. The principal other members are Stanley Woodward, assistant chief, and Charles Spruiks, ceremonial officer.

How members of the staff feel about their work was revealed in a recent speech by Mr. Woodward. "We have no royal coaches in which to parade our visitors, no palaces and no diplomatic uniforms," he pointed out. "We have, of course, the army, navy and marine corps, which always do much to make our ceremonies dignified, and best of all, we have a native sincerity and hospitality which I believe more than makes up for the gold braid and other trappings that we lack."

"The members of the American press and the ever-present cameramen are not always conducive to the solemnity of our ceremonies, but nevertheless they are really a great asset to us. . . . In a country where there is a controlled press, it always seems to me that everything is stereotyped. Indeed, if it were not for the press and the camera newsreel, the visits of the distinguished visitors to the United States would lose at least a portion of their full value."

WHEN CLOTHES WERE CLOTHES—Back in 1880, when America was more interested in its future than its clothes, the president of a great railroad or bank might look like this gay fellow who didn't care about the press in his trousers so long as he made money.

green in several shades, particularly in the stripes, is once more prominent.

Ties Go Fashionable.

Ties, as might be expected, are made of the suiting fabrics—and green pops up again. Grenadine types of open-weaved net fabric are popular. The figures are smaller than last season, and the larger color range in men's suits has naturally made for a larger variety in necktie colors.

The sports trend is particularly strong in hosiery, and naturally the colors are brighter and the materials lighter. Bright plaids and checks are much in evidence. Short socks with elastic tops in lisle, rayon or silk, seem to have the edge for spring and summer. For business wear vertical or horizontal stripes or checks will be seen most often. Mesh socks will probably get a good run for the summer.

Shoes? Influenced by sports, they'll be sturdier looking this summer since the tip and vamp have been shortened. Most popular, and most comfortable, will be the semi-sports shoe and the town and country type characterized by its crepe rubber sole. The perforated and woven leather shoes will also be worn frequently. Countless types of unlined shoes in various color combinations show that footwear, at least, is defying convention.

If you're the rugged he-man type to whom a suit is a suit, be it pink or black, 1939 "spring fashions" may be so much eyewash. And it bears repetition—the time-honor blue serge suit is still considerably more practical for many men than a stylish ensemble of green. But the clothing experts need encouragement after all these years of fruitless struggle. Now that they've spoken their minds, you can take it or leave it!

New Dealers conducting campaign to aid nomination of Thomas E. Dewey as Republican presidential candidate; the plot being to prevent the nomination of Senator Taft, whom they fear . . . Backers of bill to take profits out of war really do not want the bill to pass, and it probably won't . . . Little likelihood of railroad legislation at this session of congress.

WASHINGTON. — New Dealers close to the White House are actually conducting a publicity campaign which would seem calculated to aid the nomination for President by the Republicans next year of a man President Roosevelt cordially dislikes. That man is Thomas E. Dewey.

Not that this publicity campaign is praising Dewey. Quite the contrary. It avoids any reference to Dewey whatever. No, the campaign takes the form of trying to wreck the man who is regarded as Dewey's chief contender for the Republican nomination, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

If any group of 10 or more persons is polled as to the man they would name if going into a pool on the Republican nominee, a majority of them will be found to be voting for Dewey. This is by no means to say that a majority of every such group actually favors Dewey—that remains to be demonstrated by polls. But he is the man a majority of people seem to think has the edge at the present moment.

If the same groups are asked to name the man they would give second place in probabilities, Senator Taft is almost invariably the one named. This is not a matter of conjecture, and is not news. It is merely stating the foundation on which the activities of an important group of New Dealers seem to be based.

Every time in the last few months when a group of New Dealers would be at some party or gathering where friendly newspaper men were—especially parties where there could be mixing around and small group conversations, it has been noticed that within a few days attacks on Taft would appear in the newspapers represented by these correspondents. It has happened too many times to be a coincidence.

New Dealers, It Appears, Do Not Like Senator Taft

One explanation, of course, lies in the fact that of all the men who have been prominently mentioned as probabilities for the Republican nomination, Senator Taft is beyond doubt the one whom most ardent New Dealers would dislike most to have as President. He stands foursquare against more New Dealisms, and is on record as criticizing them and demanding their repeal, than any other Republican who has been mentioned as having a chance for the White House.

Far more, for example, than Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who is inclined to be liberal on many issues. Far more than even Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, who is probably more popular personally than almost anyone who has been mentioned. Whereas Mr. Dewey has stated his position on very few issues indeed so far as the national picture is concerned. He is against crime, and rackets. But so is everybody except the criminals and racketeers.

Small Chance for Bill to Take Profits Out of War

With 50 senators pledged to the proposed bill to take the profits out of war, it would seem that nothing could stop its enactment. Yet the probability is that it will be stopped, if not in the senate, then in the house. The proposal has had a strange history, often making apparent progress, but always falling by the wayside in some unexpected manner.

The answer is simple. Most of the congressmen backing the measure, or supporting it, do not want it to pass. There are a very few sincere senators and representatives who believe that it would be a good thing, but most of them know that actually it would do little to prevent the country getting into war, and its presence on the statute books during the period immediately preceding our entry into war would be little short of a catastrophe.

Let us assume that the bill became law, as the present demonstration of strength among senators would indicate that it readily might. From the day war was declared, any corporation which made any profits from supplying war materials to the government would be taxed virtually 100 per cent of those profits. So there would be no selfish reason for any manufacturer to desire to get the country into war.

That is the real object of the legislation. Its backers want to stop the machinations by which the wicked munitions makers involve the world in suffering, destruction and death just in order to make their own filthy profits. The public is very well sold on this idea. There have been lots of plays, movies and propaganda putting it over. There has never been anything approaching a sane consideration of the question.

But now let us assume that the steel makers of this country clearly see that the United States is bound to be involved in a major war. Under normal circumstances every one of them, with the war and navy department experts prodding them at every turn, would begin getting ready. Before war was declared, unless it came with terrific suddenness, their plants would be ready to start turning out munitions and guns of the precise type needed by the army and navy.

United States Navy Made

Good Showing in World War

As a matter of fact, the United States navy made a very good showing in the World war, while Franklin D. Roosevelt was assistant secretary, because Sam McGowan, the paymaster general of the navy, got away with murder in placing orders before the war declaration. That is why the navy was fixed so much better than the army, and why it was so much less criticized.

But under the proposed law any steel manufacturer who spent a penny on the chance that the United States might get into the war would be a traitor to his stockholders, even if he had shown a patriotic spirit.

Why? Because there would not be a chance of his making any money for his stockholders, and there would be the cold certainty that, in addition to not making any money during the war period, he would run into severe losses immediately after the war period.

The history of every munitions-making enterprise in private hands has been that it made big profits during the war, and then took terrific losses after the war, what with cancelled orders, unused inventories and unneeded expansions of plant. So they just wouldn't.

Answer: Government monopoly of the munitions manufacturing business if the law passes. And the army and navy don't like that. They fear congress would never be liberal enough in advance to have the nation properly prepared.

Unlikely to Be Railroad Legislation at This Session

It is very unlikely that there will be any railroad legislation at this session of congress. Congress has been tussling with legislation to put the railroads back on the track to financial stability almost continuously for the last 20 years. Their condition has been worse instead of better and no laws will be enacted this session which can be of any significant benefit to them without the prospect of a larger volume of traffic. The very best that congress can do is to help the roads take better advantage of more business when it comes.

The problem resolves itself into an attempt to put a better face on the plain fact that the public demands several transportation services but refuses and probably is actually unwilling, certainly at times, to support them all adequately—railroads, trucks, busses, inland and inter-coastal waterways, pipe lines, and air lines. What the public as a shipper won't pay has been met to some extent by subsidies but with the idea more of provoking extension of alternative, competitive services than of maintaining them.

Difficult for Congress to Turn Out Satisfactory Law

Couple the railroads' proposals as presented to congress in the "committee of six" bill with the opposition of water, highway and air lines, plus the objections of the railroads and their employees to any compulsion to develop more compact operating systems by consolidation and co-ordination, then add the resistance of creditors to accepting losses inevitable in railroad reorganization which offers any prospect of continuing solvency, and the chances are slim indeed that congress will be able to grind out a law that is of any more durable value than the transportation act of 1920, or the emergency transportation act of 1935.

In the last year two separate and opposed expeditions into the transportation muddle have set out from the White House. Following the interstate commerce commission's decision last March granting the railroads a 5 per cent increase in rates on their petition for a boost of 15 per cent, President Roosevelt called into conference Commissioners Splawn, Eastman and Mahaffie of the interstate commerce commission, Jesse H. Jones of R. F. C. and other administration officials, Carl R. Gray, vice chairman of Union Pacific, Henry Bruere of the Bowery Savings bank and George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives association. The upshot was a report by the I. C. C. commissioners which the President turned over to congress in April with a message in which he reiterated his opposition to government subsidies and government ownership.

TIPS to Gardeners

Fertilizer Usage

GARDENS can't go on producing excellent flowers and vegetables year after year without an application of fertilizer now and then. Because stable manure is difficult to obtain, a complete commercial fertilizer recommended by your dealer will prove most satisfactory. Before applying fertilizer, however, give consideration to a few simple, practical hints.

First, be cautious! Never apply fertilizer recklessly or over-abundantly. Don't be like the man who saw a neighbor get good results from a sparing use of fertilizer. He proceeded to apply 10 times as much, but expecting 10 times as good results—but his garden proved worthless.

Broadcast the complete fertilizer over the soil 10 days before planting, using about three pounds per square rod. Three or four weeks after planting, if the garden seems a bit backward, apply a side dressing. Sprinkle fertilizer lightly alongside the rows, about six inches from the plants; then cultivate. Apply only from one to two pounds per square rod of garden.

SAFETY TALKS

At the Crossroads

THE "dirty work at the crossroads" of fable and story has a counterpart in the pattern of modern automobile accidents.

The National Safety council reports that in 1937 about 58 per cent of all injury accidents in cities occurred at intersections.

In rural areas, however, only about 24 per cent of the injury accidents occur at intersections.

The council said 52 per cent of the intersection accidents that involved two motor vehicles were right-angle collisions.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of worldwide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorder and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Territory Reclaimed by France Termed 'Hell Hole of Creation'

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

As northern Africa recently echoed to the tramp of mobilizing men, French troops made headlines by marching again into a strip of land on the northeast coast of the Dark Continent which had been under French ownership before. The territory reoccupied was a region between Italian Eritrea and French Somaliland. Little more than 300 square miles in extent, it was ceded by France to Italy in 1935 under an agreement which the Italians themselves repudiated just a few months ago.

The area into which the French are reported to have moved has an important strategic location. It commands the southern outlet of the Red sea at the narrow strait of Bab el Mandeb between Arabia and Africa. Furthermore, it is directly opposite, and only about 10 miles away from, the British-occupied island of Perim, off the coast of southwest Arabia.

Holds Key to Trade Lifelines.

Through the bottleneck of Bab el Mandeb sail the ships of four empires, Great Britain, France, The Netherlands and Italy. This strait is the third geographic key, following Gibraltar and the Suez canal, which unlocks the Mediterranean short cut from Europe to east Africa and the Orient. Its treacherous currents have earned it the name "Gate of Tears."

Including the 10-mile stretch of reoccupied territory, the coast of French Somaliland now overlooks the major portion of the Bab el Mandeb gateway. With the exception of its convenient and strategic situation, however, the additional land has little to commend it. It is hot, dry, and sparsely settled. Under a blistering sun, temperatures rise so high that the struggle merely to exist is an endurance test.

Not a Pleasant Place.

Its barren, sandy shores merge, toward the interior, into dry, rocky plateau land with little vegetation. Waterless, except in time of rare rainy-season floods, river beds are usually little more than deep desert ditches. Although the climate is not considered especially unhealthy for white men, the possibility of sunstroke is a constant menace. One explorer traveling over a route not far away named the entire region "Hell Hole of Creation."

The small area in black shows territory reoccupied by France after it had been ceded to Italy under the treaty of 1935, in order to strengthen the defense of Assab. The area covers only about 300 square miles but is of great value for control of the Bab el Mandeb strait.

In this northern section of French Somaliland, the inhabitants are largely Dankali, sometimes called "Black Semites," because of their intermingled Arab and Ethiopian blood.

They earn a precarious living as nomadic herdsmen in the uplands and as fishermen along the shores. Pearl diving is also an important coastal occupation.

Fish are plentiful there and are the chief food for many of the natives, supplemented only by rice, dates, and coffee. In the bush, men add to a scanty food supply goats' milk, and an occasional gazelle brought down by expert marksman with sling or dart.

Minorca, Spanish Stronghold Important to World Traders

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

The surrender of Minorca gave the Franco Spain control of the last Loyalist-held island of the Balearics group, off the eastern coast of Spain.

Minorca is the second largest of 15 islands in the Balearics. In an area of less than 300 square miles, it holds—in normal times—some 45,000 inhabitants.

Strategic stepping stones between Europe and North Africa, the Balearics lie in the path of two imperial sea lanes. Minorca, easternmost of the islands, is a geographic halfway mark between France and her North African possessions. To the south runs the British short-cut to India, by way of Gibraltar and the Suez canal. In addition, on both sides of the islands, ships ply direct routes that link the Atlantic ocean with ports of northeast Spain, southern France, and western Italy.

Important in History.

To its position on the crossroads of the Mediterranean, Minorca owes an early place in international history. Two centuries before Christ, Mago, brother of the famous Carthaginian general, Hannibal, founded the island's capital of Portus Magonis, now Mahon.

In the war against Rome, the Carthaginians made good use of the Minorcans' special talent for sling warfare. Eventually, however, the Romans took over the island. The Vandals and Moors followed; after which Minorca, with the rest of the Balearics, became a Moorish kingdom—and a pirate stronghold.

Conquered by James I of Aragon in the Thirteenth century, the island was seized by the English five centuries later. In the struggles that followed, Minorca changed hands five more times. It was shifted from French to English to Spanish possession, then returned to England, and was finally turned over to Spain. After the treaty of Amiens in 1802, the entire Balearics became a Spanish island province.

An Island Melting Pot.

Modern Minorca shows the effect of its varied occupations. English, Spanish, and Arab types persist, despite the general race mixture. Whitewashed houses and garden walls reveal the Arab influence.

The excellent port of Mahon on the southeast coast suggests the English provinces, with its gleaming brass knockers and lace blinds. Visitors to Minorca's country homes tell of seeing Eighteenth century English furniture and French engravings from the time of the revolution.

On the other hand, Ciudadela, former Moorish and Spanish capital on the west coast, is an old Spanish town.

Even the prehistoric past is architecturally represented in Minorca. Mysterious monuments of the earliest inhabitants are the numerous cave dwellings that honeycomb the mountains and the queer-shaped stone structures scattered about the island. In different forms, the latter are known as talayots, taulas, and naus, variously supposed by students to have served as ancient defense towers, as religious and burial chambers, or as practical storage rooms for grain and fodder and shelter for domestic animals.

Of special interest to Americans is the fact that this little island in the Mediterranean is the ancestral home of Admiral David Farragut of Civil war fame. The father of the admiral, George Farragut, was born in Minorca of the ancient Spanish house of Ferragut, as it is spelled there.

Hollywood Hoax Finally Exposed; Just a Balloon!

HOLLYWOOD.—The next time a close-up of a snarling movie monster brings Junior yelling out of his seat next to yours at the theater, push him back and assure him it's only a big balloon.

And when the kid brother comes home praising the golden tresses of the screen Loreleis in "Footlight Parade," retort: "Aw, rubber."

For again you'll be right.

H. H. Knudsen, Hollywood official of the B. F. Goodrich company and a seasoned expert on motion picture uses of rubber, reveals that almost anything seen in the movies may be rubber.

For example, most movie monsters are made of rubber. The toothy crocodile in the Tarzan series was 40 gallons of solidified rubber latex with seven electric motors in his innards to make his jaws gape and his tail lash. Remember the dreadful face of King Kong, the mountainous ape? That was rubber, too. And the giant dinosaurs which walked, roared and tore through "The Lost World" were motor-driven rubber latex critters.

As for the blondes, continuous water scenes in the musical wreaked havoc with their coiffures. So Knudsen supplied rubber to make waterproof presses for the beauties.

The majority of the horses in "The Charge of the Light Brigade" were only rubber equines mounted on tracks and controlled in battle through ingenious mechanical devices, Knudsen reveals. And the figures that come hurtling down from airplanes, precipices and bridges—they are sponge rubber dummies.

Small statues which are bounced off the heads of movie husbands by embattled spouses are made from rubber, as are the guns and knives in G-Man pictures.

Rubber has its prosaic uses in the movies, too. Witness the rubberized underwear supplied by Knudsen to the Alaska-bound "Call of the North" company to ward off colds and give protection against low temperatures and cold waters.

Most extensive is rubber's use for deadening sound, accomplished by use of sheets of sponge rubber in cameras, rubber flooring on sound stages and parts of sound cameras.

The Coach

By BEN AMES

© Associated Newspapers, WNU Service.

IT WAS bad enough, Roger Kerrick decided, to lose one's girl and flunk one study without a perfectly fatuous coach coming along to bawl one out in front of the team and make a general nuisance of himself nosing into affairs that were none of his business! Just as if one wasn't likely to flunk an exam. Or stay out late a few nights. Life, he decided, had deteriorated to a pretty mess when a fellow couldn't even see his girl and go to a few shows without getting posted. Most likely that prosy old coach had seen him with Diana and was plain jealous.

Diana was always gay, he reflected; he couldn't recall ever having seen her cross or impatient with him, or with any one for that matter. She made all her classes regularly and kept a fairly decent average, although the times she was called down in class for unpreparedness was noticeable. But did she answer back? Not so you'd notice it. Di wasn't the crabby sort. If any one wished to think harshly of her they were welcome, for all she cared! Of course, Di wasn't anything like Betty. Betty was poor and had no sport car or sporty clothes to go with it, and Betty not only won wonderful marks and honors, but she had made the Phi Mu and was being urged to join the Epsilons as well, besides being a guard on the basketball team and a runnerup for the tennis championship of the school. And the greatest difficulty with Betty was that she expected too much of a fellow. Not the sort of things Di expected; not candy and movies and dances and dinners. Rather, Betty expected him to go out and win his letter the first year by spectacular play; or win such high marks that he got some sort of medal.

And so he smiled warmly upon Di and reluctantly admitted that he had to stay in and bone up on English, adding that the fool coach threatened to remove him from the team if he got another seventy!

"Why, you poor lamb, you!" exclaimed Di in her high, shrill voice. "Come over to my flat and have a bite to eat and let's talk it over."

But Betty. Gee, Betty was different. Betty wouldn't let you have a sandwich and cake and ginger ale plus in the afternoon, not much! She'd dig out a few oranges and some other fruit and advise adherence to diet rules as per the coach.

And Betty wasn't wise to herself the way Di was. Betty was unashamed of the dusting of fine golden freckles across the bridge of her small nose; she called them tennis croix de guerres. And she never used powder or rouge or any other makeup.

Somehow most of Betty was uncomfortable, he decided. For Di did not play tennis; it was messy! She hated golf; one had to practice too much. Riding horseback was too hard. And swimming—ugh! Eels and fish and bugs. So Di did none of them—much too messy. And Roger basked in the comfortable warmth of her smile without regretting too much his break with Betty.

At seven he started home toward the boarding house where the crew lived, his thoughts happy and his mind pleasantly exhilarated by the plus ginger ale, and at Elm and Center streets an orange car whizzed out from the murk of the avenue where Di lived and he felt a sharp pain and then started falling immeasurable distances through space. Di had run over him going at fifty-mile speed—it was too much trouble to watch out for every jay-walking pedestrian.

He awoke in the college infirmary and Betty sat beside him holding his hand tightly with one hand and holding a Latin grammar and grinding out passages of Virgil from a book propped on a chair in front of her. He was conscious of a great weight lifted from his heart and mind and vaguely recalled having talked a great deal—wondered if he had been delirious. After a while he thought of Diana and he wondered why he wasn't disappointed not to care any more for her, and then it struck him as ludicrous that he should know that he didn't care for her without arriving at the decision through the usual devious method of thinking. Betty saw that his eyelids were fluttering; he couldn't fake unconsciousness any more, so he opened his eyes and asked what happened.

"A girl ran you down over on Center street—only a slight scalp wound, Rog; you can get right after your English tomorrow. And it may save your life—this week in bed."

"You darned little coach!" he muttered, bringing her hand up to his lips. "All you do is worry about me and my grade," and his eyes told her what he couldn't say until he had won the right to ask her.

"Did you think I'd bother to—coach—you if I didn't care?" she said softly, turning away to blink the unwilling tears from her lovely gray eyes.

And just then the nurse came in with a box of flowers from the coach and a cheery note from the crew. Rog's eyes dimmed as he turned to Betty and it didn't occur to him to wonder why Di did not come; he knew she loathed hospitals.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Explains How Food Can Make You Fat or Thin; Offers Tips on Gaining Weight

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

TO NEARLY every adult, weight is a matter of great concern. Thin people step on the scales in the hope of finding that they have gained a pound or two. Fat people sometimes weigh themselves several times a day, trusting each time that the arrow will point to a slightly lower figure. In many cases, the reason for this absorbing interest is vanity—a desire to look better. But the real objective should be to attain the weight at which one feels better, for few people realize that to weigh neither too much nor too little is one of the best possible aids to buoyant health. Moreover, the secret of weight control for normal individuals lies in the kind and amount of food consumed.

The science of nutrition teaches us that all body fat originates as surplus fuel . . . that is, food which has been consumed over and above the immediate requirements of the body machine. It therefore follows that in general the problem of losing weight is concerned with an increase or reduction in the total fuel value of the diet.

Shortage or Surplus of Fuel

Those who find it difficult, after 30, to avoid taking on excess pounds must learn to reduce the total fuel intake. Otherwise, they may find themselves burdened with a mounting surplus of fat, which not only destroys beauty, but impairs health, and tends to decrease both mental and physical efficiency. On the other hand, those who feel that they must struggle to keep their weight up to normal . . . who declare that they simply cannot gain, no matter how much they eat, should acquaint themselves with the high-caloric foods and make a persistent effort each day to eat a little more than enough to meet their needs. If a gain is achieved, the result will be well worth the effort. For just as overweight is a handicap to health and efficiency, so have nutritionists observed that physical efficiency may be definitely decreased when the weight falls more than 10 per cent below the average for one's height.

It is often said that it is easier to lose weight than to gain it, and in many cases this is true. For the overweight person who consistently cuts down the fuel value of the diet, should, under normal circumstances, be able to reduce gradually, comfortably and effectively. But the individual who is underweight often has a small appetite and therefore has little desire to eat the increased quantities of food that are required in order to gain.

Influence of Body Build

Nutritionists have observed that many people who find it difficult to gain have a tall, slender type of body build. It has been determined that in people of this type, the digestive tract is usually shorter than in those having a stocky build. Moreover, they tend to be more tense, more active and of a more nervous temperament. As a result, the passage of food through the digestive tract may be so rapid that it leaves the body before all the available nutrients can be utilized. At the same time, these active people tend to burn up more of their food for energy, so it is not surprising that they fail to store body fat, unless the diet is especially planned to meet their needs.

Concentrated Foods Desirable

The well balanced diet, with its full quota of minerals and vitamins is basic to good health for all. But in order to produce a gain in weight, the diet of individuals belonging to the slender type should be composed of easily digested foods, which can be utilized by the body with a minimum of effort; and it should include generous amounts of concentrated and highly nourishing foods.

Included in this classification are eggs, cheese, cream, butter or margarine, bacon, bread, cereals, cream soups, custards, ice cream, rice and tapioca puddings. The addition of two or three glasses of milk to the regular meals will be found useful in increasing the fuel value of the diet. Milk also belongs in the reducing diet, but there it is used to replace other high caloric foods. Fruit juices will be found useful in stimulating the appetite of those who desire to gain; and the fuel value of these beverages may be increased by the addition of milk or cream.

An Extra Meal

Very often it is possible to get extra nourishment into the diet by way of a light lunch in mid-morning, mid-afternoon or both—provided it does not interfere with the appetite for the regular meals. This may take the form of fruit juice and crackers; malted milk; cocoa, egg nog or plain milk. A between-meal snack is regarded as especially desirable for thin people whose work is fatiguing. It will help them to sustain energy and prevent them from coming to their regular meals too tired to enjoy or profit by food.

Importance of Rest

Since thin people have a tendency to tire quickly, they are advised to get plenty of rest. There should be long hours of sleep at night, and nutritionists have also observed that the food is apt to be better utilized if a short rest is taken before meals.

Poultry Raisers:

If there was a better Chick Starting Mash on the market than VITALITY, we would be handling it! We do not say that Vitality Starting Ration with yeast, wheat germ oil, and manganese, is the only good starter on the market but we do say there is NO OTHER starter that is better than Vitality.

It takes less than 2 lbs. of Vitality Starting Ration to raise a chick to 6 weeks of age. Cheap or poor starters take from 3 to 3½ lbs. to do the same work so we say IT PAYS TO FEED Vitality starting Ration if you are interested in saving money. We can furnish Vitality Starting Ration in MASH or Pellet Form. Place your order NOW with us for feeds and Poultry Equipment. We can save you money.

YOU MEN FOLKS

ARE WE RIGHT OR WRONG when we say your present way of washing clothes is unsanitary, expensive and a burden on your wife? You don't use horse and buggy methods in your shop or on the farm so why let your wife use them in her laundry. Compare the two methods of home laundering and judge for yourself.

THE OLD WAY

WORK—Soaking clothes, wringing heavy wet clothes into the washer, into rinse tub, into second rinse tub and then into the clothes basket. Handling heavy wet blankets and comforters. Pulling a heavy machine around, cleaning tubs, washer and floor.

DANGEROUS—Machine may tip over, you might slip on the wet floor, or get caught in wringer. Many women and children are seriously injured on wash day.

SICKNESS—Germs multiply extremely fast in warm, dirty water and if some one in your family is sick, the germs may spread to other members.

SANITATION—You would not think of washing your face in dirty water, then why wash clothes in dirty water, that you and your children wear next to your skin?

HEALTH—If you consider your wife's health, don't make her spend a day a week working in hot steam, lifting wet heavy clothes and handling dirty, smelly water.

THE BENDIX WAY

Put dry soiled clothes in the BENDIX, set the dials, add soap and the BENDIX will soak, wash, rinse three times and damp dry all automatically. The Bendix never uses second-hand, dirty water. Only fresh clean water is used in every operation, and by actual tests by users the Bendix uses less water than the old way of washing.

As the Bendix is completely automatic, while the clothes are being laundered, your wife can prepare breakfast, go shopping, read or do other things. No wet hands, no steam, no muss,—no backaches—no headaches—no blue Mondays.

We are so certain that the above statements are true that we are willing to prove it by doing a washing in your own home. You'll enjoy it and there is no obligation.

P. S.—To those of you who send your laundry out, here are a few tips.

Perhaps you send out only the most durable clothes and still have the dainties and the children's clothes to do at home. The Bendix will wash all of your clothes from the dirty overalls, heavy comforters and blankets down to the sheerest hosiery. The Bendix will not wear out your clothing, tear off buttons or need strong soap. You have complete control of your washing, your clothes are never mixed with those of others. For five dollars a month you can own a Bendix and do your own washing, so if your laundry bill is over a dollar per week you are buying a Bendix but you never get it. Think this over and call Orland 136-J-1 for demonstration.
